Other Business - Web site honor	(12-3-04) From National Coordinator Shari Handley: I'm proud to announce that The USGenWeb Project's national web site has been chosen for inclusion as an example of excellence in a lesson on evaluating web site content being developed as a part of a US Dept. of Education Grant. It is part of a FIPSE (Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education) Grant for the Academic Advanced Distributed Learning (ADL) Co-Lab, based at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. The name of this particular grant program is quite a mouthful: "An Investigation of the Pedagogical and Economic Effectiveness of Sharable Content Objects, Using Standards, in Online Instruction". The aim is to improve the efficiency and quality of online learning, and our web site is being used as an example of a web site that meets the "Coverage" criteria. For more information: http://www.tyaskin.com/USGen.htm - copy of the storyboard showing how the USGenWeb site will be used http://projects.aadlcolab.org/fipse-publicweb/index.htm - ADL Co-Lab's site for this FIPSE grant program http://www.fipse.aed.org/grantsshow.cfm?grantNumber=P116B020126 -

	FIPSE's info on this grant program Congratulations and thanks to our webmasters Mike Jarvis and Julie McGrew-Ayers for designing such an excellent national web site for us. We USGenWeb members have appreciated your work, and it is nice to see others recognizing it, too!
